A Billion Dollar Target
Chicago's Big Gain
Pope Pius Will Broadcast
18,000 Foot Building

By Arthur Brisbane

ON THE FERRY from Jersey City to Liberty St. early yesterday, you could see flocks of airplanes above the money district reaching from the East to the North river and from the Battery to Canal St.

Lastly floating in the air above the water were two big blimps, and the navy's giant Los Angeles.

Later you learned that New York was bombed, skyscrapers and banks destroyed by 152 military planes, and most interesting, the navy's great fleet parading below had been sent to the bottom of the water.

That was theoretical. But if it had been real war there would have been no theory. Instead, a great city adrift wiped out.

If 132 planes, one dirigible and two blimps could work such havoc what could a real fighting air fleet do, such as the French fleet for instance, with 8000 airplanes.

However, men learn slowly. When the automobiles first appeared, one misguided person bought Andrew Freedman's almost brand new Brewster-Hammon cab at a bargain and never put a horse in front of it. Thickens roost on it to this day.

Chairman Britten, of the House naval committee, wants to spend one billion dollars for more floating ships.

What nice targets such a fleet would offer to armies 20,000 feet up.

"Nearly complete," according to the Chicago Herald & Examiner, the census figures give the big city more than 3,350,000 inhabitants.

That is a gain of 648,000 since the last census and almost 100,000 more than Chicago's Association of Commerce expected.

And Chicago hasn't shown anything yet. Wait until 8000 hydroplanes coming from Europe on one side, Asia on the other, drop daily on the smooth waters of Lake Michigan. That coming and then Chicago will have a real population, spreading to Milwaukee on one side, Gary on the other.

Pope Pius, who has installed a broadcasting station in the Vatican, will, according to an Associated Press dispatch, utilize the use of the station with the faithful everywhere.

That scientific miracle would have amazed the ancient popes.

Charles M. Schwab, in pleasant optimism, says 1930 will be a year of normal progress. Progress, he better believe, than was six or nine months ago.

Engineers in Mr. Schwab's organization, fighting out stress bearing and weight-carrying capacity of steel construction, say it is mechanically possible to build a skyscraper 18,000 feet high. Such a building would have 1800 stories, and require a large base.

With modern building conditions, all the ground floor space in the building would be needed for elevators.

But human intelligence will overcome that, and Mr. Otis, of the Otis elevator fame, is working now on the problem of multiple elevators in one shaft.

This writer once rode in such an elevator in London. It moved slowly, the cars attached in an endless chain, that turned around and came down without turning upside down.

An inventive mind could make such a machine with endless cars, express and slow elevators.

The express elevators to stop at every 10th or 20th floor, not to start again until all operators had signed "safe." To avoid "safe" it will be done. What man can imagine, he can do.

Tomorrow will be mother's day. For a man fortunate enough to have his mother there would be 365 mother's days. Every year, and 365 in leap years.

A man needing to be reminded of his mother by her "day" might remember that the best present is something pretty.

Don't imitate the farmer and his two sons who, once a year, on their birthday, brought their new axe to cut wood.

Trolley Car Hangs Over Bridge

12 Passengers and Motorman Within as It Crashes Rail at Fore River

Twelve passengers and the motorman on a Quincy to Weymouth at car today narrowly escaped death when the car jumped the rail on Fore River Bridge and hung suspended over the water for a half hour.

The car was on route from Quincy to East Weymouth and had just passed over the draw when it jumped. Motorman William M. Fields of Commercial St. East Weymouth, clung to his post and was the last to crawl out the emergency door in the rear.

Aside from a shaking up and fright, the passengers were unhurt. They were assisted out by others led by Patrolman Anthony Tancos of Weymouth police.

FRUIT LINE TO BUILD 6 SHIPS

Contracts for six steamers, then to be constructed at Fore River at a cost of $5,000,000, were placed today by the United Fruit Co.

NEW ORDER WIPES OUT RUM, VICE SQUADS

The much-heralded shakeup in the Boston police department took place today.

Fifty-six members of the rank and file, the majority of them patrolmen, were affected by the changes.

Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, in a general order, abolished the headquarters liquor and narcotic squads, assigned the special service squad to the Bureau of Criminal Investigation and placed Deputy Superintendent James McDevitt in charge of the bureau over Chief Inspector Ainsley C. Armstrong.

This action was taken after the new commissioner had ordered 34 roving automobile taggers back to their stations, to be supplanted by new men on Monday.

Under the shakeup order Lieut. Daniel J. Hines, severely criticized in the attorney-general's investigation of Oliver B. Garrett, was sent to Station 13, Jamaica Plain.

Capt. George W. Fatterton, also under fire in the probe, who commanded the liquor, vice and narcotic squad, and to whom Hines was second in command, has applied for a pension and was mentioned in the order.

No other division commanders were referred to, although it had been expected that a number would be transferred or retired.

CAVERLY TRANSFERRED

Commissioner Hultman said that Deputy McDevitt will make a survey of the detective bureau, and any changes be desired. The commissioner added he intends to increase the personnel of the bureau, as the citizens of Boston deserve more protection.

The order came through at a time when police of all divisions were elenching a drive against speakeasies and other questionable resorts, captains having been requested to turn in lists of all such places to the commissioner.

NEWS, VIEWS AND GOSSIP OF SOCIETY IN AND ABOUT GREATER BOSTON

Cambridge
Fete Gala
EventSociety Well Represented at Assembly in Buckingham
Hall Ballroom

THE BIGGEST SOCIAL event of the season in Cambridge was largely attended last evening when society turned out for the Cambridge Assembly at Buckingham Hall. The ballroom was artistically decorated with rose-shaded lights, canopied boxes in ivory tones and with palms, Japanese lanterns; lilacs and palms were used for floral decoration.

EXCEPTIONALLY IT WAS ONE of the prettiest dances we have attended this year. For Miss Evelyn I. Perkins, head of the junior committee, was daintily flowered, and the black net; Mrs. Arthur Brooks was distinguished in purple chiffon with diamond bands; Mrs. Kenneth Murdoch, in orange chiffon. These patronesses were in the receiving line with Mrs. Robert Weston, who wore black lace. From 11 o'clock until 12 Mrs. R. E. Slater in white and Mrs. Edward M. Whitney in brown tulle were the many guests. Others in the receiving line were Mrs. Edmund Marwan, Mrs. Howard M. Turner, Mrs. Herbert W. Turner, Mrs. Charles Walcott, Mrs. Robert Walcott and Mrs. John Noble.

I THINK IT WAS MR. HERBERT HARWOOD, who was dancing with Mrs. Russell, the mayor's wife, and we noticed Mrs. Kenneth Murdoch dancing with Mr. James P. Baxter. The Ralph Bruders (Gleason) couple was dancing, and they were dancing and away like trees in the wind. It was a joy to watch them. Mr. Bradley seemed to get on well with all of his partners—we saw him take Miss Edith Weston on the floor and they performed beautifully. Miss Webster wore a white chiffon dress with a blue sash, which suited her sleek blonde grace. Later we saw Mrs. George W. Ward, grand of the Harvard medical school. His sister, Miss Eliza Gregg, was looking very pretty in a blue dress with a white sash, becoming to her tall beauty. Mrs. Roger M. Burke in a blue dress was very much in the mode, and Mary Goss in a white dress. Mrs. David Jacobus wore black and gold gothic gown. Mrs. Charles W. Foster, and Miss Mary Forbes were noticeable in red floating chiffon. Her bridesmaid, Mrs. Forster, who took place recently.

Mrs. Goss, who had a good time, looked very pretty in black with bright blue embroidery. Mrs. Goss, who had a good time, looked very pretty in black with bright blue embroidery. Mrs. Goss, who had a good time, looked very pretty in black with bright blue embroidery.

THERE WERE MANY DINNER parties before the affair of the largest being that of Mrs. Francis Carlin, who looked daintily in flowered chiffon. She had a party of 18, among whom were Mrs. Charles W. Foster, Mrs. Dwight, Roger Calver—Mrs. Caulter was attractive in pink satin with gold embroidery—the Swans. It was a balmy evening and under the old apple tree and the front steps were popular places during the intermissions. Mrs. Mary Dewitt Clinton seemed to be enjoying herself under the evening skies with her handsome Southerners, Mr. Patrick Armistead Gibson.

THE BALCONY WAS ANOTHER rendezvous and afforded an excellent place from which to watch the dancing. Mrs. and Mrs. F. Stanton Cawley seemed to be contented to sit on the balcony. Mrs. Cawley is the daughter of Mrs. E. P. Putnam, well-known portrait painter who has just completed a new study in Cambridge. The Cawleys are journeying to Iceland in the autumn for the 100th anniversary of that interesting little island. We hear that proceeds from the dance will please the committee.

THE MARRIAGE OF MISS Elizabeth Brewer Kenney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Francis Kenney of Brookline, to Mr. Theodore Clark Wood, son of Mr. Theodore Clark Wood, will take place on May 12 at the Lyndon Church in Brookline. Miss Evelyn I. Perkins to Wed Among Ames

OF UNUSUAL SOCIAL INTEREST and prominence is the marriage of Miss Evelyn I. Perkins, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Ames of Hartford, Ct., to Amy Ames, son of Prof. and Mrs. Ames of Boston. Miss Perkins has chosen Saturday, June 14, as the date of the wedding, to take place at the home of her parents. Miss Perkins will be attended by Miss Evelyn Ames, sister of the bridegroom, and other Ames of Hartford. Miss Perkins will be best man. Only the immediate families and a few friends will be present.

Club Heads
Will Meet
WednesdayBy NANCY BREWSTER
Massachusetts clubwomen, anxious to know the "why" of affiliation with the State and General Federation, will learn the answer when seven club residents talk on the subject at the president's luncheon next Wednesday.

Feature of the opening session of the State Federation three-day meeting at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, the luncheon-meeting will draw within its confines presidents now in office and those who soon will be found at the helm of club life.

The perplexing questions have been repeatedly asked of the club executives by members when contemplation of membership in the parent organization has been ripe.

Among those who will participate in the discussion, "What does it mean to my club to belong to the State and General Federation?" will be Mrs. Francis A. Bagnall, Hyannis Woman's Club; Mrs. A. August MacWilliams, Cosmos Club of Waltham; Mrs. George Taber, Brookline Woman's Club; Mrs. Robert Walker, West Concord Woman's Club; Mrs. James J. Storow, chairman of the Massachusetts Committee of Better Homes.

Also Charles W. Taylor, Current River Club Hyde Park; Mrs. Joseph H. Gough, Swampscott Woman's Club; and Mrs. Herbert A. Payne, Greenfield Woman's Club. Mrs. Anel A. The Band Sounds a New Note in Trimming

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American, Paris, May 10.

THE BAND still plays its part in the creating of the silhouette. Straight bands, intricately curved bands, diagonal bands, all have their well defined place on both day and evening frocks, as well as suits and coats.

These bands give the complex simplicity that is so essential in the garment of today, thus making it possible to wear the little frock at all hours during the day.

Bands are used to give the necessary nuances to the hips, while curving bands lend the sweep and flare to the skirt, that is both good looking and practical.

Straight and diagonal bands are used on coats and suits to lend interest to the garment, and give the necessary "dressmaker's touch" that is so much sought after in a garment, for it bestows that indescribably expensive air that is desirable.

As an example of the importance of the band in the building of a frock we show today a sketch of an afternoon frock from Paton's latest collection.

It is of black crepe silk with a neck finish and a jabot of embroidered lawn.

A pink rose is worn at the top of the jabot. Intricate, curving bands, insidiously over the hips, sweep down in front and form deep pleats. The sleeves are bloused above the cuffs and decorated with a band of the material which cross over one another.

The other drawing depicts the charms of a very recent and attractive model from Worth's latest collection. It is an evening frock with a design of chocolate colored flowers on a white ground, worn with a shantung coat of matching brown.

The dress has a neck collar, fringed along the edge, and wide attached belt is buckled in front. A narrow ruffled fringe forms a circular skirt.

The cost is quite simple, being flared at the hem. It is only detail consisting of flaring sleeves on the lower part of the dress.

PRINTED CREPE FROCK with a chocolate colored flowered design. The creation is from the Worth collection. The dress has scarf collar, fringed along edge. Sketched in Paris.

league will first tender an informal luncheon to Mrs. Morgan at the Hotel Somerset, attended only by the presidents of the affiliated organizations and members of the executive board.

THE BAND still plays its part in the creating of the silhouette. Straight bands, intricately curved bands, diagonal bands, all have their well defined place on both day and evening frocks, as well as suits and coats.

These bands give the complex simplicity that is so essential in the garment of today, thus making it possible to wear the little frock at all hours during the day.

Bands are used to give the necessary nuances to the hips, while curving bands lend the sweep and flare to the skirt, that is both good looking and practical.

Straight and diagonal bands are used on coats and suits to lend interest to the garment, and give the necessary "dressmaker's touch" that is so much sought after in a garment, for it bestows that indescribably expensive air that is desirable.

As an example of the importance of the band in the building of a frock we show today a sketch of an afternoon frock from Paton's latest collection.

It is of black crepe silk with a neck finish and a jabot of embroidered lawn.

A pink rose is worn at the top of the jabot. Intricate, curving bands, insidiously over the hips, sweep down in front and form deep pleats. The sleeves are bloused above the cuffs and decorated with a band of the material which cross over one another.

The other drawing depicts the charms of a very recent and attractive model from Worth's latest collection. It is an evening frock with a design of chocolate colored flowers on a white ground, worn with a shantung coat of matching brown.

The dress has a neck collar, fringed along the edge, and wide attached belt is buckled in front. A narrow ruffled fringe forms a circular skirt.

The cost is quite simple, being flared at the hem. It is only detail consisting of flaring sleeves on the lower part of the dress.

PRINTED CREPE FROCK with a chocolate colored flowered design. The creation is from the Worth collection. The dress has scarf collar, fringed along edge. Sketched in Paris.

THE DAILY HUBBUB

By ARTHUR SKELDING

OLD TIME FUNNIES

James O. Fagan, scholar, historian and ex-serviceman, cavalier of the Old South Meeting House, is a living compendium of old Boston gossip. We have often been in the old meeting house for one reason or another—once to take a look at the portrait gallery in the rear hall. The picture of Sara Molasses, Indian squaw, was always admired. Sara was probably a very picturesque character of her day. We wanted to ask Mr. Fagan all about her, but somehow the query got distracted. The tercentenary program was more to the point. We wanted to get historically minded for this forthcoming event. . . . what was the style of Puritan humor. . . . if any? He pointed out some curious incidents of that period—1790 to 1820.

For a time there were two factions in the Old South Church who fought bitterly about whether or not the building should be heated. One crowd didn't like the idea of putting in new fangled coal stoves; the others were more modern and liked to take their religion in comfort. They were known as the stoveless and anti-stoveless. The stoveless were in the minority for a long time but finally they won. Prior to this during the winter months it was customary for members of the congregation to bring their dogs (yes, real ones) and set them on the foot of their pews.

DOG FIGHT

With so many dogs in the church and dogs being dogs. . . there was sometimes trouble. Mr. Fagan did not tell us what kind of dogs they used for heating purposes, but presumed that the long haired breeds were favored. However, there must have been the good and bad kind. . . the pious and sinful. Were they trained to do during the long sermon? The discipline of these useful animals was pretty strict. However, occasionally they broke bounds. . . a strange loose dog walking down the aisle would start trouble. He'd meet another dog of uncertain temper and then a fight was on. It is recorded in the annals of the church that one Sunday morning such a dog fight took place directly in front of the pulpit. The sermon was not all the other dogs yelping and for a time there was a perfect bedlam. Nevertheless the preacher kept right on with his sermon. . . not a bit perturbed. Such was the character of Puritan self discipline. The dogs were finally separated (sometimes in those days acted as dog quilters), and peace restored. We forgot to ask Mr. Fagan which dog won the fight. But anyway it must have been a moral victory for the preacher.

FASHIONABLE SQUEAKS

This we got, too, from Mr. Fagan. In the old days it was the mode for many people to impress their inferiors with the noise of new possessions. In their Sunday meeting bent they liked to flaunt their sequency shoes and bustles. . . they even liked to have their paw pads appended below was the admonition: "Big men are expected to sit at least five paces worth—if this is beyond their capacity they are requested to leave the scrape in the little baskets at the door."

Possibly for the best behaved dogs on Sunday.

NOTE FOR FUTURE HISTORIANS

We were chatting with Tom McQuade today, in Thompson's Shop. Tom is floor manager and hand-shaker in chief for that corporation. Senator Parkman was standing at the fountain toppling off an ice cream cone. . . well, all the Parkmans for several generations have carried their daily regardless of weather. They are sturdy (the Senator) carrying on the tradition.

WIDOW SHOTS 400 PRIESTS OFFICIAL, SELF HONOR HEROES

Minneapolis, May 10 (AP)—A woman shot and critically wounded Alderman J. Russell Sheffield today, then shot herself. Sheffield and the woman, Mrs. Marie Riley, 31, a widow, were reported near death in hospitals.

Sheffield, shot twice, told his version of the shooting at St. Mary's hospital. Returning from a party early today they quarreled, he said, and after entering Mrs. Riley's home she seized a revolver and ordered him into the back yard, saying:

"Now time for you to say your prayers."

He stepped out and fired, but two shots took effect.

Don't say "It can't be done" until you've tried a Hunt Aid.

Tunis, May 10 (AP)—French priests who fought in the World War today supplemented the official Eucharistic Congress program with an inspiring ceremony to the war dead of Tunis.

Four hundred strong, they marched to the war monument and placed palms at its base in the presence of a vast throng.

After a moment's hush, the assemblage burst into tremendous cheers.

Abbe Bergey, a member of the French Chamber of Deputies, spoke a glowing tribute to the silent heroes.

"We who fought in the great war for lasting peace" he said, "perhaps understand best how the spirit of the Holy Eucharist ennobles all of these men, be they Catholics or Protestants, Jews or Moslems."

Judge Scolds Woman Juror for Seeking Telepathic Aid

Los Angeles, May 10 (AP)—Efforts of a woman juror to obtain "divine aid" through mental telepathy brought a rebuke from Judge Schott.

Three messages, containing the requests, were intercepted. The case was that of Morris Levine and Miss Leontine Johnson charged with obtaining $750,000 from Charles Crawford, a broker on threats of revealing his alleged part in the Julian Petroleum stock swindle.

"It is your duty to decide the case upon the evidence," the judge said. "You must not seek the aid of mental telepathy or thought transmission."

FEAR OUTBREAK ON 'SEPOY' DAY

Bombay, India, May 10 (AP)—Unusual protective measures were in force throughout India today to prevent communal rioting between Hindus and Moslems on the occasion of the Mohammedan feast of Bakrid, in commemoration of Abraham's sacrifice of the lamb.

Today is the anniversary of the great Sepoy mutiny of 1857, and with the Indo-Moslem antipathies greatly accentuated by reason of Moslem abstention from the civil disobedience campaign—there was particular apprehension. Moslem sacrifices of cows, sacred to the Hindus, constituted another danger element.

STARS TO SEE BEBE WED BEN

Hollywood, May 10 (US)—Sensational stars of cinemaland will participate in the wedding June 14 of Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, the bride-to-be revealed today in naming her attendants.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Marion Davies, Lily Lee, Betty Compson, Adela Rogers St. Johns, Constance Talmadge, Diana Fismourie, Marie Moulou and Mae Sunday. Loni Anderson, editor of Universal picture editor of Universal Service, was selected as matron of honor.

Simultaneous with Miss Daniels' announcement, Lyon named Hal Howe as his best man and Henry H. Hart, George Fitzmaurice, Sam Hardy, Frank Joyce, Howard Hughes, Skeets Gallagher, Dr. Harry Martin and Wallace D'Amore as ushers.

In a sportsman it's Fair Play

in a cigarette it's Taste

POPULARITY IN A SPORTSMAN rests first of all on fair play; in a cigarette on better taste.

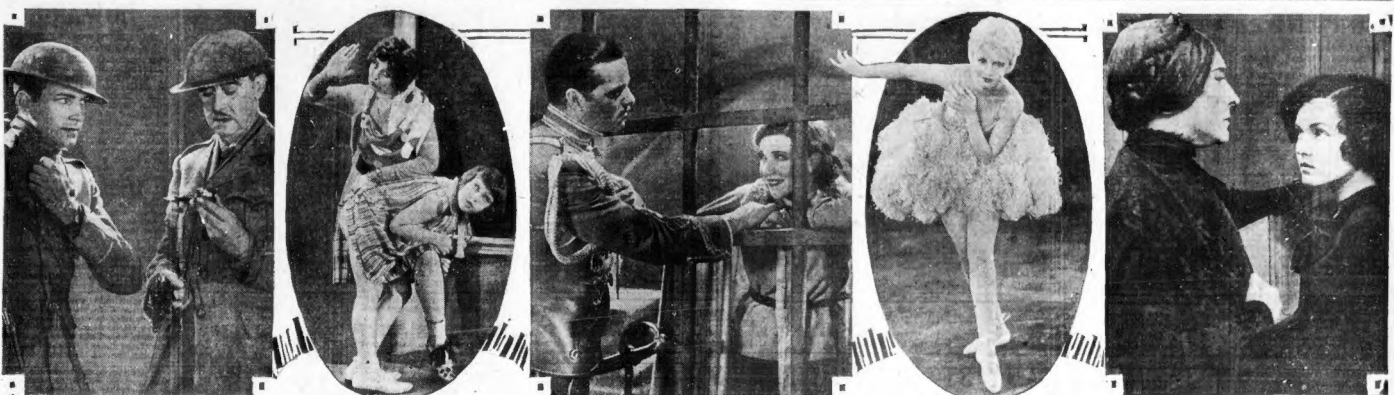

CHESTERFIELD'S POPULARITY is fairly won with finer tobaccos, blended and cross-blended to give greater delicacy and richer fragrance.

IT TAKES TIME and is costly to make cigarettes the Chesterfield way, but no other way arrives so surely, so completely at what you want most . . . "TASTE above everything".

We stand as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield cigarettes are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price. LUGGATT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

Larry Agrees to Freedom for Linda

Bright-haired, vital, alive, young Anne Murdock had been three years at the Boston Advertising Agency when her opportunity came—the opportunity to become Linda's personal secretary. To work with a man of Lawrence's breadth and power was something to dream of, for Anne had ambitions beyond a suburban home with Ted O'Brien, who was on her own rung of the ladder. The only beauty Anne Murdock saw in her own home was that of her sister, Kathleen, who had lately deserted that home for a career in the chorus. But Anne overheard a conversation between her secretary and young O'Brien, which leaves him wondering whether he may not have to surrender his efficient assistant to Cupid. Anne senses this and determines that she has no desire whatever of matrimony. Eaton sends Anne on a business trip to Chicago. On her return she learns that Kathleen is planning on a runaway marriage. Anne meets her in the Eaton household to a head by calmly asking for a divorce. The plan was like a bolt out of the sky to Eaton.

CHAPTER XXV

"I want a divorce," Linda repeated.

In the moment which elapsed before he answered, Eaton felt a hundred conflicting emotions; relief, a wild hope, regret and more. All his uncertain plans for reaching Anne were dissipated by that one clear demand. To be sure, he had arrived at the inevitable conclusion that Linda, his wife for 10 years, was no longer necessary to his happiness, nor he to hers.

Yet at her abrupt challenge she pride lifted a bitter and angry voice within him. He was, for the fleeting moment, almost ready to believe that he had been required of him, he would have been willing to make tremendous concessions, amazing sacrifices to insure Linda's happiness—the sacrifice of his work, of his emotions, of his veritable existence.

Almost—but not quite. The cool, ironic sense of humor which Anne had discerned in him to his rescue, and with it his basic sense of justice and the knowledge that for the sake of an empty, complacent beast gods would be willing to throw away the life of his own future happiness.

With a single glance Linda had cut the Gordian knot of their mutual problem. Women, in the majority, are less obvious than men. They are less intelligent in the past and the present they are in the future.

In the first kiss of two young lovers the girl, her eyes closed, escapes from the exquisite flame of that caress, is dreaming, and the boy knows only the captured moment. And now Linda, who the boy has failed to capture ahead, discarding all the past, is looking at him with a frank demand for freedom.

"You no longer love me," Eaton said rather than asked. Men are the sentimentalists. As a rule, they are not. They are youthful, untaken happiness they have known, regardless of the future, the initial benediction of their union.

"These things he relived with a poignant and aching regret that they should no longer be his. The ephemeral moment he regarded Linda, the woman, through the eyes of the Larry who had been her lover. Linda answered "No" thoughtfully, and sat down near him, composing her restless hands in her lap. "I'm fond of you," she said, "and we're friends. That's what I rely on your friendship for me. We've been happy, I admit. But for five years, really—the marriage has been a misadventure."

"You can't always live on the heights," Eaton reminded her. "No, I didn't expect to," Linda told him. "But you've become more and more engrossed by business; you've had no time for me. And in that time, I grew up with you. I want to have anything in common. We've been quite as content as a couple as together. I've run your house for you and made you, when necessary, a doltie with me. There was a time, Larry, when I wasn't just smiling at you, I was in love. Now I feel that I've been unhappy at the heights. You've been an infidel as I. A wife who trembled when you came near her would have been a fool. At least, I think so. You've been content with things as they are. But I want a new life in the future. I want a chance to take the happiness my maturity offers me."

Lord Mayor Clark of Malden, Eng., to Be at Public Services Sunday

With Lord Mayor Arthur Laver Clark of Malden, England, as its special guest, Malden began tomorrow a three-day celebration of the granting by the General Court on May 11, 1648, of a petition setting the community apart as a town.

The English mayor and his wife are in the town tomorrow for the first time for the public religious service. They will be attending a public reception on Monday evening, Malden, which holds the distinction of being the first town to petition the colonial government to set apart the town as a town with historical and literary programs throughout the week.

On Tuesday a number of speakers will make addresses in the junior high school. They include Lord Mayor Clark, Prof. Arthur Bushnell Hall of Harvard, Governor Alvan F. Fuller and Commonwealth Treasurer Richard W. Latham, a direct descendant of the town's founder, John Winthrop.

Almost—but not quite. The cool, ironic sense of humor which Anne had discerned in him to his rescue, and with it his basic sense of justice and the knowledge that for the sake of an empty, complacent beast gods would be willing to throw away the life of his own future happiness.

THREE ISSUES CHALLENGE TO WHOLELY

Wants to Debate "Public Assistance Bill" to Show Up "Insult to Labor"

With the "public assistance" bill coming up in the House Monday, Wendell Phillips Thore, sponsor of old age pensions, today challenged Representative Joseph Mahoney of Boston to a debate in the House.

Characterizing the "public assistance" bill favored by Mahoney as a "superstition," Thore demanded a meeting on the public platform to show the public what the bill would do to the old age pensioners.

In his challenge, Thore, who has worked for old age pensions for many years, said: "The statement made by Representative Mahoney concerning old age pensions is a pure and simple insult to labor."

Thore said that the bill would take away from the old age pensioners the right to work, and that it would take away from them the right to live.

FAITH IN BALDWIN

Through the Boston American, Commissioner of Conservation William A. L. Bazeley today issued a warning to woodcutters and trappers.

The forest fire hazard is still present and the ban has not been lifted from restrictions placed in force by two proclamations of Gov. Allen, he pointed out.

No fishing is permissible on any fresh water in Massachusetts, the open season on trout and pickerel having been officially closed. An extension of the season when the fire menace is past is promised.

DON'T FORGET MOTHER!

Tomorrow is Mother's Day—say you forget.

In churches throughout the city there will be prayers for mothers offered at tomorrow's services and over the radio there will be Mother's Day programs.

There will be flowers carried to mothers, of course, and in honor of mothers there will be a red carnation for the Mother's Day. A white carnation for the Mother's Day.

By letter, telegram and cablegram, affection to her will be received from distant sons and daughters.

Mother's Day was started in 1914, and each year has been growing in sentiment.

Antique Sofa Lands Father, Daughter in Court Fight

A rare Sheraton sofa sent a father and daughter into Suffolk Superior Court today in a family row over its possession.

Judge E. B. Bishop granted a temporary injunction against Miss Virginia F. Forbush of Brighton, restraining her from destroying or secreting it from her father, Walter R. Forbush of Boston.

Atty. James M. Oates, counsel for the father, and the plaintiff, Walter R. Forbush, filed a bill of complaint to have the sofa returned to him.

A sheriff was also threatened to seize the sofa on a writ of replevin.

The capture of Fort Ticonderoga from the British by Ethan Allen, who is an outstanding example of a prodigious Hyperkinesia. He made himself a leader of the Vermont during the Revolutionary War, driving out both the British and the French from the state of New York, which then claimed the territory.
